November President's Message

Friends,

October was a very busy month. In the ritual area, it started with Yom Kippur, ably led by Dr. George Kornfeld. Sukkot came next. We had a series of successful services held at our shul and Beth Am, with participation also by Beth David and Ohel Avraham. Many people were involved in leading services, reading Torah, building the sukkah, and taking it down again. I want to especially thank Janet Grable, who volunteered to organize the Sukkot dinner, and cooked for 6 additional meals. If you didn't attend the Sukkot dinner, you missed a great meal. The luncheons that followed were equally impressive. Not to mention the cakes...

Later in the month, a group of people from our Board and officers met with Rabbi Lou Feldstein for an interesting evening discussing the different attitudes that people have towards change. He told us about "Originators", people who jump into change, "Conservers" who approach change slowly and incrementally, and "Pragmatists" who are in between. It probably won't surprise you that the majority of the members of our Board are Conservers. We also have a few Pragmatists, including me. We are now preparing for a program on November 23rd on collaboration between congregations. Any member of our Congregation who is interested in our future collaborations is invited to participate. Just contact me and I will get you on the list. The big shuls can't make such an open-ended invitation, that's one of the advantages of being small.

We finished the month with the latest in our series of Jewish-Muslim interfaith dialogues, a very interesting panel discussion of "The Role of Women in our Religious Traditions". I want to especially thank Elana Spezio, Steve Teitel, and Paula Bobb for the hard work they put into the program. There will be further programs throughout the coming year. Watch for them.

November has no Jewish holidays in it this year, but I hope to see you at our regular Shabbat services, and I look forward to your participation in our planning for the future.

Have a great month.

Leon Metlay

Enjoy the beauty of Autumn! Winter will be here soon.
